Your company, written down, with the evidence behind every word.

BUILT ON PURPOSE

TEN PEOPLE, TEN ANSWERS

Ask ten people in your company what you do and you will get ten answers. All sincere. None the same.

That is not a people problem. Nobody ever wrote it down. And when it is not written down, everybody who touches your company has to guess. Your new hire. Your sales rep. Your web designer. Your video producer. They will all guess differently, and they will all be confident.

The Manifesto ends that. It is the governing document of your organization. It states what you are, why you exist, who you serve, and how you speak, in enough detail that anyone in the company can act on it without you in the room.

HOW IT GETS BUILT

WE INTERVIEW EVERYONE WHO HOLDS PART OF THE TRUTH

Not just you. Leadership, your longest-tenured people, and where possible a customer.

WE STUDY YOUR MARKET AS IT ACTUALLY IS

Not as the trade press describes it.

WE READ YOUR COMPETITORS HONESTLY

Including where they are genuinely better than you. Especially there.

WE EXCAVATE THE PURPOSE

We do not invent it. A purpose you did not already have is a slogan and everybody can tell. It is already in your building. Somebody has to dig it out and say it clearly.

WE VERIFY BEFORE WE WRITE

Every claim is traced to something a person said, a customer reported, or the market shows. Where the evidence does not support a claim you wanted to make, we tell you.

THREE REVIEW PASSES, SOMETIMES FOUR

Every one of them is more discovery, because people say things in response to a draft that they would never say to a blank page.

VERIFICATION

You see the evidence before you see the words.

This is the part most owners do not expect and the part that changes the most. What stops a capable owner from saying what his company is worth is not vocabulary. It is that he cannot confirm the words are true, complete, and not the same thing his competitor says.

So the Verification section comes first, ahead of everything else in the document. Your own people's words. What your customers reported. What the market actually shows. And an honest list of what the evidence does not support.

Then you meet the language that came out of it. You are not judging our writing. You are confirming a conclusion you can trace.

The standard we hold. Could a direct competitor sign this unchanged? If yes, it fails and we go back and dig. We do not fix thin material with better adjectives.

WHAT IS INSIDE

Seventy pages or more, following the same architecture every time. We have run it on an eye surgery practice and on a managed IT company, and the two documents sound nothing alike.

VERIFICATION

The evidence beneath every claim, including what it does not support.

THE DECLARATION

What you believe, what you refuse, and what you commit to.

THE ORIGIN

Where you actually came from, written down before it walks out the door.

COMPANY IDENTITY

Purpose, mission, vision, values, position, and archetype.

THE CULTURE

How your people behave, what good work means, and where the line is.

THE AUDIENCE

Who you serve, and who you refuse.

THE SERVICES

What you sell, and all you sell.

THE VALUE

Why you, and what it is worth.

MESSAGING

How you say it, at every length. Story, talking points, proof, and objections.

VISUAL IDENTITY

How it looks and why. Color, type, logo use, photography, and video.

THE EXPERIENCE

What a client actually goes through, start to finish.

CORE OBJECTIVES

What this must accomplish, and how you will know.

THREE THINGS COME OUT OF IT

THE MANIFESTO

The full document. It governs every decision you make about how this company presents itself.

THE PLAIN PAGE

All of it distilled onto one sheet. Printed, posted, and handed to every new hire on day one. This is the version that actually circulates.

THE BRAND FILE

A machine-readable companion built to load into ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini, or whatever your team uses. Paste it in and the tools finally sound like your company. Your competitors have the same AI tools you do. What they do not have is anything worth putting into them.

THEN WE STAY LONG ENOUGH THAT IT GETS USED

A document that is right and unopened has produced nothing. Adoption is a change in behavior, and behavior changes with time and accountability rather than good intentions. So accountability is included rather than assumed.

AN IMPLEMENTATION HANDBOOK

How to use it, what decisions to run against it, and what to do in the first thirty days.

A THIRTY DAY CHECK-IN

Early enough to catch a document that has not been opened.

A NINETY DAY CHECK-IN

Late enough that real decisions have come up, and the right time to ask which ones were run against it.

SIX COACHING SESSIONS

Through a partner coaching organization. Ongoing coaching is not our strength, so we partnered rather than pretended.

ONE THING TO BE CLEAR ABOUT

This document is for you and your leadership team. It never gets posted, published, or handed to a customer. It is the blueprint your public communication gets built from, which is why it can afford to be honest.

WHAT YOU HAVE TO BRING

Session attendance by the decision maker personally. Access to your people. Responses at three review passes. Decisions made when they are asked for. A client who cannot commit to that cannot buy a Manifesto, and it is better to establish it in the first meeting than to discover it in the third month.

START WITH AN INSIGHT

Every engagement we run begins with knowing where you stand. Two hundred ninety nine dollars, and then we will tell you honestly whether a Manifesto is your next move.
